On February 19, 1942, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed Executive Order 9066, authorizing the incarceration of Japanese Americans during World War II. Recognizing that rights had been violated, President Ronald Reagan later signed the Civil Liberties Act of 1988, providing an apology and restitution to those who were incarcerated. Join us to mark the 75th anniversary of this moment in history with a new exhibition and a special program featuring:

- Videos by national competition awardees of the National Japanese American Memorial Foundation’s Digital Storytelling Project.

- Objects out of storage and hands-on cart activities relating to the Japanese American experience.

- A conversation with incarceration camp survivors Shigeru “Shig” Yabu, Sam Mihara, Takashi “Tak” Hoshizaki, and Mary Murakami, moderated by award-winning filmmaker and author Dr. Karen Ishizuka.

- Book signings by authors Karen Ishizuka and Shig Yabu.

February 19, 1:00 p.m.–3:00 p.m.
Wallace H. Coulter Performance Plaza, 1 West National Museum of American History
s.si.edu/DOR @amhistorymuseum #EO9066

Program cosponsors:
Heart Mountain Wyoming Foundation
Japanese American Citizens League
National Japanese American Memorial Foundation
Smithsonian Asian Pacific American Center